

Pursuing My Childhood Dream of Helping Others Through a Nursing Career Focused on Holistic Care and Patient Advocacy

Ever since I worked at a summer camp in high school, I discovered my calling to help others through nursing. I was the camp nurse, bandaging scrapes and taking temperatures. It was incredibly rewarding guiding campers on their health needs.

I've since obtained my BSN degree and have experience in med-surg nursing. However, my true passion is geriatric care.

I'm pursuing a Master of Science in Nursing, focusing on gerontology. Older patients have always held a special place in my heart. I have a gentle and sympathetic bedside manner that helps put seniors at ease.

I listen attentively to their needs and make them feel cared for. Whether simply keeping them company or explaining a complicated healthcare issue, I take time to connect with each patient. My upbeat, compassionate nature seems to resonate with the elderly.

I aim to one day manage the nursing staff at a long-term care facility. I want to ensure high safety and care standards are met for our elderly population. I also plan to research chronic diseases affecting seniors to find better prevention and treatment options.

My career dream is to open my own assisted living facility that provides individualized care in a home-like environment. I feel incredibly lucky to have found my passion so early on. Nursing has been my calling since childhood, and I can't wait to make a difference.
